

Dr. Patrick Lukens is the lead faculty member in the History and Political Science department at Eastern Arizona College. He has lived his entire life in three of the 4-corners states (Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona). Patrick earned his BA in History and MA in Public History at New Mexico State University in Las Cruces and his PhD in History at Arizona State University in Tempe. After completing his PhD, he worked in a one year post-doctoral internship as a policy analyst for the Arizona Board of Regents, then moved on to Eastern Arizona College in 2000. Since 2012, he has also been an adjunct faculty member in the Arizona State University @ EAC program. Patrick's fields of study include public policy/political history, Latin America, US/Mexico borderlands, US/Mexican relations and Mexican American ethnic history.

Patrick is the author of A Quiet Victory for Latino Rights: FDR and the controversy over "Whiteness" published by the University of Arizona Press, and has been an invited book reviewer for The American Historical Review.

He lives in Safford with his wife Jerri. They have one daughter, Victoria.