

With High School and Junior College behind me, and drawn to the desert by its beauty and mystery, I moved from Southern California to Tempe, Arizona - August of 1971.

Classes began directly after my arrival, and upon completing a course of study at Arizona State University, I received a BAE in Education with an Art Minor.

After graduation from ASU ... I moved to Prescott, Arizona and spent some of my time there working for Sharlot Hall Museum. In the 1980's I returned to Phoenix working on various projects and for other museum's in the Valley.

I moved from the Valley to Miami, Arizona in 2000 – 2001 ... where I currently serve as the Executive Director of Bullion Plaza Cultural Center & Museum. I am also active on several local community boards of directors including the Globe Miami Chamber of Commerce.

Moving forward – I have always enjoyed history, research, restoration, exploring, and hiking. Also, books made of paper with hard covers and interesting content. After 44 years in Arizona - the deserts, mountains and the mystery they hold is still a draw....

even in the heat of summer.
