BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE: William A. Small, a native of Chicago, Illinois, was born to William Alexander Small and Margaret Priscilla Deacon Small (1867?-1950) on February 23, 1894. He attended public school in Chicago and began his journalism career with the Chicago Herald-Examiner in 1915. Following service in the United States Army during World War I, Small worked for the Madison State Journal and the New York World.

In 1927, Small and two associates founded Small, Spencer and Brewer, a national newspaper advertising firm in Chicago. In partnership with William H. Johnson, Small purchased the Tucson Daily Citizen in 1936 from the estate of Postmaster General Frank H. Hitchcock. He sold his interest in Small, Spencer and Brewer and moved his family to Tucson in September 1939 to oversee the business aspects of running the Citizen.

When William Johnson retired in 1950, Small became sole editor and publisher for the next fifteen years. He believed strongly that a newspaper should represent and serve its community. Small's community-oriented editorial policy, coupled with his personal commitment to Tucson's progress, earned the Citizen nine of the first twelve annual community-service awards given by the Arizona Newspaper Association.

In addition to his editorial duties with the Citizen, Small was involved with many business and community organizations. he served as president and treasurer of the Citizen Publishing Company; president of Tucson Newspapers, Inc. (1940-1966); president of Arden Publishing Company; director of Scott-Foresman and Company (1942-1960); director of the Arizona Bank; director of the Tucson Y.M.C.A.; member of the Board of Directors of the Tucson Airport Authority and the Hospital Planning Council of Greater Tucson; and member of several clubs and organizations. Small retired from the Citizen on April 22, 1966 and sold his interests in the Citizen to his son, William A. Small, Jr. He divided his retirement years between residences in Tucson and La Jolla, California.

William Small was married to Elizabeth Foresman on September 12, 1923. They had one son, William Arden Small, Jr., and two daughters, Elizabeth Foresman Small Shafer and Margaret Priscilla Small Hart. Small died in La Jolla, California on September 5, 1975 at the age of 81.

William Houston Johnson was born in Cadiz, Ohio on September 15, 1883, the son of Henry Clay Johnson and Rachael Jackson Johnson. He graduated from Urbana High School in Ohio and began his newspaper career as a $5/week press boy in 1898. From 1898 to 1906, he worked for his foster uncle's newspaper, the Flushing Evening Journal of New York, holding general-assignment and police-reporter jobs.

In 1906, Johnson became general manager of Perkins Press in Tacoma, Washington, which published six newspapers. In 1908, he returned to New York to join William Randolph Hearst Enterprises, where he was business manager of the American Sunday Weekly. From 1918 to 1926, he was an executive with the New York Herald-Tribune syndicate after which he founded Johnson's Feature Service. In 1928, he sold his interest in the feature service and pushed the Flushing Evening Journal, selling it in 1929.

In February 1936, Johnson bought the Tucson Daily Citizen with William Arden Small. Johnson co-published and edited the Citizen news for fourteen years. He retired as an editor in 1950, but he continued to write feature articles for the Citizen until 1957. In 1958, he sold his interest in the Citizen to William Small, ending a 22-year association with the newspaper.

During his career, Johnson was a member of the American Society of Newspaper Editors and the Associated Press, where he was on the nominating committee in 1947-1948. Despite his small physical stature and the loss of sight in one eye in a 1938 auto accident, Johnson was known as a man who held firm to his convictions in politics and journalism, to the extent that he changed party affiliations from Republican to Democrat in 1943 when he disagreed with the national Republican Party policies.

Twice married, Johnson wed Lucille Sabin on March 6, 1903 and had two children, William Houston Johnson, Jr. and Lucille Johnson Dyer. They were divorced. He married Pia Chamberlain on February 6, 1928.

Following several years of failing health, William Johnson died in Tucson on March 31, 1964.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE: This collection related primarily to William Small's and William Johnson's activities as publisher of the Tucson Daily Citizen, and to their involvement in local, state and national affairs. The collection contains documentation of newspaper publishing in Tucson, especially during World War II, and the Tucson Daily Citizen's contributions to the growth and development of Tucson and Southern Arizona.

The collection is arranged in two subgroups of material relating to William A. Small and William H. Johnson, respectively.

Subgroup I: William Small

Series I: Correspondence, 1926-1973 consists of personal and business correspondence relating to Small's publishing career, his civic activities, and the development of Tucson after World War II. The bulk of the correspondence dates from the 1940's through the 1960's. The material is arranged alphabetically by personal or corporate names of correspondents. Correspondents include several Arizona political figures including Barry Goldwater, Carl Hayden, John Rhodes, Howard Pyle, Paul Fannin, and Morris Udall. Prominent journalists such as columnists Westbrook Pegler and Drew Pearson are also represented. Much of the correspondence and related materials document the growth and development of Tucson's businesses and organizations. The correspondence relates to newspaper publications; specific Citizen articles about community issues; and invitations to many civic and business functions. A significant portion of the business correspondence documents Small's activity as a member of the Board of the Scott-Foresman Company in Chicago, 1942-1960.

Series II: Minutes and Proceedings, 1947-1968 consists of stockholders' and director's notices and records of organization meetings. The bulk of the material in this series relates to the Tucson Airport Authority, 1947-1958, when Small was a director of that body. Also included are materials from Tucson Newspapers Inc., 1965; Phoenix Television Inc., 1949-1950; and Hospital Planning Council, 1964-1965, as well as other business enterprises in which Small was involved.

Series III: Financial Records, 1932-1972 consists of financial and investment statements, fiscal reports, personal income tax records, and expense accounts. The bulk of the series pertains to the Tucson Airport Authority. Also included are items from the Hospital Planning Council; Small, Spencer and Brewer, Inc.; and various financial records from organizations and businesses in which Small held interests. There is also a 1941 appraisal report of Tucson Newspapers, Inc.

Series IV: Legal Documents, 1932-1964 contains Small's real estate mortgages, guarantees and agreements; bylaws and contracts for the Tucson Airport Authority, Tucson Newspapers Inc., Hospital Planning Council, Phoenix Television Inc., and the Tucson County Club; a resolution concerning the Tucson Housing Authority; and court records of Small's petition against the Pima County Board of Supervisors over property valuation and the sale of securities from the estate of William Coates Foresman.

Series V: Hospital Planning Council Proposals, 1964 consists of two proposals for consulting assistance prepared by A.T. Kearney and Co. for the Hospital Planning Council of greater Tucson, Inc.

Series VI: Receipts, 1929-1972 includes personal receipts; Tucson Newspapers Inc. medical insurance claims; and a small number of receipts for equipment, supplies and mailing charged to the Tucson Daily Citizen.

Series VII: Certificates and Awards, 1944-1969 includes recognition certificates from the United States Army, the United States Navy, and the United States Treasury Department; certificate of appreciation from Arizona governor Paul Fannin for Small's participation on the State Council for Support of Water Development (1964); Sigma Delta Chi membership certificate; and the University of Arizona's Medallion of Merit award for distinguished community service (1960).

Series VIII: Printed Material, 1929-1965 contains lists of newspaper advertising rates from the 1930's; membership lists for business, civic, and newspaper organizations to which Small belonged, including the Tucson Airport Authority and the United Fund; press releases from Barry Goldwater, John F. Kennedy, and Stewart Udall; and several business and community reports and announcements pertaining to Arizona education, Arizona income taxation, civil aviation, and high-energy livestock feed.

Subgroup II: William Houston Johnson

Series I: Correspondence, 1938-1956 consists of Johnson's business and personal correspondence with related printed materials and business receipts. Most of the correspondence documents the business aspects of newspaper publishing; state, local and national politics; state and local civic functions; Tucson's growth; and newsprint shortages during World War II. Arrangement is general alphabetical. Prominent individuals represented in the correspondence include World War II hero Ira Hayes, columnist Drew Pearson, and Arizona senators Carl Hayden and Ernest McFarland.
