BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

John L. Vaughan came from Scotland to Pennsylvania and learned the trade of weaving. He married Abbie G. Strouble in 1866 and the couple moved to Merkel, Texas in 1882 where he became a railroad station manager and telegraph operator for the Texas & Pacific Railroad. Abbie Vaughan also learned the telegraph trade to the point that she could send and receive messages and is given credit with saving two trains from collision when they mistakenly got on the same track. At the age of 19 their son, Henry Lathobe Vaughan became a night shift operator at the same railroad station with his father. In 1892 Henry moved to Mexico to work as a railroad station attendant with the Mexican Central Railroad. Ultimately his father relocated also to Mexico. In 1893 Henry married Sissie Garoutte.

Both Vaughan families were forced to flee Mexico in 1912 as a result of the Mexican Revolution and both relocated to California. John L. Vaughan did in 1922 and Abbie Vaughan died in 1924. Henry L. Vaughan worked in California as a carpenter, managed a farm operation, owned a hardware store, worked with an oil company, and later with Singer Sewing Machine Company at Long Beach, CA. The Vaughan's three sons enlisted in the First World War with Ralph and Edwin serving with aviation units.

Ralph G. Vaughan became a pilot and aviation instructor prior to his discharge in 1919. Upon being released from active duty he immediately joined the Army Air Corps Reserve. In 1920 Ralph opened an auto garage in Ontario, California and married Ruth E. Lewis. Shortly after these two events Vaughan managed to purchase an airplane and established a flying school and aviation business. While in Ontario Ralph taught Reserve Aviation Officers in 1925 and 1926, performed crop dusting, and invented a camera to take aerial photographs from his bi-plane. In 1929 he and Ruth moved to Globe, AZ and opened the Apache Airlines commuter service providing connections to Phoenix, AZ. The airlines closed as a result of the Depression and Vaughan maintained work by performing barnstorming events throughout the western states. In 1940 he was recalled to active duty with the Army Air Corps.

Assigned to Boeing Aircraft at Wichita, KS as the Army representative Vaughan worked on the development of the B-29 bomber for the war effort. After the war he was transferred to Fort Worth, TX to work on the next line of Air Force bombers, the B-36. Released from active duty again Vaughan returned to Tucson, AZ and opened a salvage business, buying surplus buildings from the government and salvaging construction materials. Called back to service for the Korean War, he worked with the Strategic Air Command revising maintenance procedures and helping to organize the Inspector General's Department. He remained in the Air Force, assigned to Davis-Monthan AFB in Tucson until 1958 when he retired at the rank of Colonel. He died in 1989 at the age of ninety-one.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection consists of materials from three related family groups from the late nineteenth century to the middle nineteen-nineties. Arranged into six series the materials entail manuscript items and photographs. Family scrapbooks and photo albums enhance the collection as well. Images and manuscript items provide an interesting history of the development of aviation through the career of Ralph G. Vaughan from 1918 to the late 1950s.

Series 1 contains materials related to family background of Ralph and Ruth Vaughan. Additional family names present in the collection include Garoutte, Gildart, and Lewis. Dota Garoutte worked as a schoolteacher in Texas and the collection contains her school scrapbooks and diaries for the period 1893 to 1931. Henry L. Vaughan in addition to being a railroad station operator also wrote poems and did art work. The collection contains numerous draft manuscripts by him of short stories, poetry, and essays on aspects of life in Merkel, TX at the turn of the century. An additional biographical essay records his life in 1913 after the Vaughan families fled Mexico to California. Ruth (Lewis) Vaughan married Ralph G. Vaughan in 1920 and five folders contain correspondence, travel materials, identification cards, legal papers, and a World War II ration booklet.

Series 2 represents the bulk of the manuscript materials of the collection and largely centers around the aviation career of Ralph G. Vaughan. A military resume in folder 39 documents his career through the Second World War. Two folders document the aviation training offered to Reserve Officers in 1925 and 1926 which Vaughan and his brother Edwin participated with as instructors. Vaughan's military personnel folder and payroll documents are also contained. Eleven folders document military activities, orders, memo, and circulars impacting Vaughan from 1940 to 1958 and his retirement. Three folders provide information on work with Boeing Aircraft of Wichita, KS and development of the B-29 bomber for World War II. Numerous publications and newspaper articles are present focusing on Vaughan's successful career and achievements.

Series 3 provides photographs of family relatives and activities from both Ralph's and Ruth's families. Cabinet cards, tintypes, and carte-de-visites of family members are present in this series. Additional family images depict the railroad station and activities in Mexico where both Henry L and his father worked prior to 1912. Holiday postcards with poetry written by John Vaughan are present in folder 119. Folder 118 depicts mounted images from Merkel, TX including the first gin mill constructed, the railroad depot, and cowboys working cattle.

Series 4 depicts photographs associated with the aviation career of Ralph G. Vaughan. His work with the Reserve Aviation Officer training in 1925 and 1926 shows group photographs as well as individuals and aircraft. Aerial photographs, which Vaughan invented a camera for taking, are present in this section. Numerous images show passengers and activities associated with several of Vaughan's air services companies. A series of images show Monument Valley in northern Arizona photographed from the air by Vaughan in the 1930s. Folder 138 depicts three airplane crash scenes, which Vaughan was involved with.

Series 5 contains negatives associated with Ralph and Ruth Vaughan. Only seven negatives have photo images associated with them in the collection and are contained in folder 10. Negatives show aerial views of Globe, AZ, mining facilities, homes in the desert environments, animals, desert landscape, and aerial views of a city. All negatives are stored separate from the collection in the negative storage location of the Historical Society.
