Class Papers, 1963 - 1968

DESCRIPTION

This collection consists of seminar papers dealing with topics in western history by students at the University of Arizona for Prof. John A. Carroll. The class was titled Western History Seminar and papers were submitted between 1963 and 1968. Topics include diverse subjects featuring Arizona and Southwestern history including mining, religion, military, political, ranching and Native Americans. The class was an undergraduate offering but carried the designation "399g" identifying it as an upper class seminar generally offered to select history majors. It is interesting to note that the papers were all typed in memory graph format thereby allowing for multiple copies to be made for distribution to fellow students or other sources. The papers provide many topics of interest to present researchers and most contain valuable narratives on the subjects and footnoting information.
