

CHRONICLES OF WAR

Apache & Yavapai Resistance in the Southwestern United States and Northern Mexico, 1821-1937.

By Berndt Kühn

Based on three decades of extensive field work and exhaustive research in manuscript and published sources, Berndt Kühn chronicles more than a century of conflict between Native Americans, Anglos, and Mexicans in the southwestern United States and northern Mexico. The nearly 4,000 entries in this meticulous compendium provide essential information on combatants, casualties, and locations of battles, skirmishes, and raids, along with the relevant sources for further research. Maps and tables chart the ebb and flow of warfare and tally the cost in lives and property. A comprehensive bibliography and detailed index enhance the value of this seminal work for scholars and beginning researchers.

Berndt Kühn has produced a massive and significant work chronicling the battles, skirmishes, and raids of the Southwestern borderlands war. The study is unprecedented in its scope and detail, built on a wide array of primary and secondary sources, nicely organized, easy to follow, and simply packed with information.
