HISTORICAL NOTE: Actors Theatre of Phoenix was established in 1985. At the time there was only one major theatre company in the Phoenix area and it very rarely hired local actors. It was for this reason that Carol McLeod, Judy Rollings, Glorianne Engle, and Gerald Burgess started the Actors Theatre of Phoenix Company. The Actors Theatre started out in a bank building in downtown Phoenix. It was a small space, with curtains separating the “stage” from the rest of the building. From the start, this company got rave reviews from both critics and audience members largely due to the inspired leadership of Judy Rollings, Jim Pinkerton and Matthew Weiner.

During its thirty-year history, the company put on 151 productions. They ranged from knee-slapping comedies (Beehive produced twice by popular demand) to tear-jerking dramas (Baby Dance and Doubt). The company was known for taking risks and staging plays that other theatre companies would not. They also performed A Christmas Carol almost every year without fail, occasionally with slight variations.

The Actors Theatre Company shared several guiding principles: public service, education and innovation. They believed that theater should be accessible to everyone regardless of ability to pay so they started the “priceless matinee.” At these shows people paid what they could or paid nothing at all to see. The Actors Theatre understood the need to engage young people and put considerable effort into developing the student matinee. These shows were specifically for students who were given study guides and an entire educational experience about stage performance.

In 1989, due to budget constraints, the Actors Theatre moved out of the bank building and into the newly built Herberger Center. Here it occupied Stage West, a substantially larger venue. The larger space meant bigger productions and, they hoped, a bigger audience. In 2010 it became clear that the Company was not creating enough revenue nor getting enough funding from its benefactors to continue paying for rent at the Herberger Center. There were talks of merging the Actors Theatre with the Herberger Center but no agreement was reached. In 2013 the company became a nomadic troupe that traveled to different venues in Phoenix before settling at the Mason Performing Arts Center where the company shared the stage with other companies. In 2015, the Actors Theatre Company was liquidated by unanimous vote of the Board of Directors due to lack of funding. A victim of the downturned economy, it was one of many regional and small theater companies that closed. What remains is the Actors Theatre's enduring reputation for local acting at high standards and introducing audiences to a wide range of theater productions not often seen in the Phoenix metropolitan area.
