BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Charles Baehr Gatewood was born April 6, 1853 near Woodstock, Virginia; attended West Point, and was assigned to the 6th Cavalry in 1877. He served as a commander of Indian scouts in the Apache country of Arizona and New Mexico taking part in campaigns which included the Victorio War of 1879-1880, Crook's expedition into the Sierra Madre in 1883, and the Geronimo Campaign of 1885-1886. He was responsible for delivering Gen. Miles' message to Geronimo and persuading him to surrender. He died May 20, 1896 having achieved the rank of Lieutenant.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

These materials were assembled by Gatewood's son, Major Charles B. Gatewood; they cover many aspects of his father's career as well as related subjects. Special emphasis is placed on Gatewood's involvement in the Geronimo Campaign and earlier Apache engagements. The collection includes original letters chiefly from Lt. Gatewood to his wife concerning his work and personal matters, four letters from Gen. Crook to Lt. Gatewood concerning the Apache, and letters of congratulation from various people to Gatewood upon the surrender of Geronimo. There are original manuscripts by Lt. Gatewood including "My Experiences with the Apaches" and "Ideas concerning the control and management of the Indians" as well as a map used by Gatewood during the Geronimo campaign and autographs of Geronimo.

A significant portion of the collection contains extracts of articles, correspondence, and books; printed articles; transcripts of reports of field operations; and news clippings concerning Lt. Gatewood, the Apache campaigns, artillery, the heliograph, and similar topics. A 138 pp. typescript "Reminiscences of my army services in Arizona" by Thomas Cruse is part of this series. There is also a great deal of correspondence between Gatewood's son (Major Gatewood), officers who served in Arizona, and other researchers and authors. Significant correspondents include E.A.. Brininstool, Henry W. Daly, Anton Mazzanovich, and Gen. Thomas Cruse, Henry W. Lawton, Eugene Beaumont, and Ken Kayitah. Correspondence between the Arizona Historical Society and Gatewood family members is also present.
