BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE: George J. Henry was born in Akron, Ohio on December 14, 1864. He enlisted in the Fifth Cavalry of the regular army when he was eighteen years of age. In 1883, he was stationed at Fort Huachuca, where he helped to erect the first permanent barracks. He also served in the San Carlos area in 1890, Tombstone in 1892 and Fort Grant in 1894. During this time he participated in numerous campaigns against Apaches in Arizona and New Mexico. Sergeant Henry was an expert rifleman and won many gold medals while touring the United States with a select group of sharpshooting soldiers.

In the course of his years in the military he served twice in Cuba and twice in the Philippines. During his second term of service in Cuba, Sergeant Henry was assigned to the Engineering division of the army and assisted in the mapping and surveying of the island. In 1909, at the close of this enlistment, he retired with a pension, having served nearly thirty years in the United States Army.

After his retirement, Sergeant Henry remained on the island of Cuba for a year or more as a manager of a hotel on a large sugar plantation. He resigned his position in Cuba in 1909 and returned to the United States, to a remote spot on the Black River in Arizona near Fort Apache. He later moved to Fort Apache itself, working as a carpenter. In 1922, when the Fort was closed, he was hired as a caretaker. In 1924 he moved to his last home at Rock Creek Ranger Station. Here he was in charge of the fire station and fire-fighting equipment.

The early part of 1940 brought a decline in Sergeant Henry's health. He refused to move to a lower altitude or the comforts of a military hospital, preferring to remain in his chosen solitude. On June 12, 1940 he died of natural causes at the age of 76.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE: This collection provides a glimpse of Arizona between 1911 and 1940, during which time Sergeant Henry took up residence in the state. It consists primarily of outgoing and incoming correspondence, both personal and business in nature. Through this correspondence, insights into the political, commercial and personal concerns of the period are provided. The collection is valuable for the documentation it provides through Sergeant Henry's letters and memos, about the closing of Fort Apache in 1922, and the years following, when he was caretaker. The collection is arranged in two record groups: the papers of Sergeant George J. Henry and the papers of Sergeant Joshua D. Vincent. The papers of Sergeant George J. Henry have five series:

Series I: Correspondence, 1903-1934 is divided into incoming and outgoing general correspondence, which is personal, job related and commercial in nature. The incoming correspondence is arranged chronologically as well as by type (personal, commercial, etc.). It contains letters written from friends, relatives and fellow soldiers from Cuba, the Philippines and many parts of the United States. There are letters from the National Republican Committee regarding support for Coolidge for President, as well as printed material advocating a “yes” vote on the constitutional amendment providing Workmens’ Compensation to employees’ of the state of Arizona. Many of the letters are responses by commercial firms to Sergeant Henry’s inquiries about health-related materials, foodstuffs, clothing and household goods.

The outgoing is arranged chronologically by year and includes a diversity of subject matters. Sergeant Henry kept carbon copies of most of his correspondence, so there is a fairly complete record of his interests and involvements during these years, primarily 1914 through 1936. They cover a broad range of topics, including personal letters to friends and family, business correspondence relating to his job as caretaker at Fort Apache, inquiries regarding problems with mail service and other problems he observed, as well as commercial mail orders. Since he was so isolated, it was necessary for him to obtain much through the services of mail order companies.

Series II: Biographical Material, 1882-1940 consists of two folders. The first of these is a previously-processed collection, under the same number, donated to the Arizona Historical Society by John W. Lee in 1941. Included are various army documents and correspondence as well as a three-page essay written by an unidentified author. This was written in George Henry’s honor at the time of his death in 1940. The other folder contains primarily autobiographical notations by Henry, and other army materials.

Series III: Legal Documents, 1920-1928 consists of three insurance policies with Aetna, National Casualty Company and General Exchange Insurance Corporation.

Series IV: Financial Documents, 1911-1936 contains five folders and consists primarily of mail order receipts, general receipts, and bills and receipts related to the Fort Apache Rifle Club. Sergeant Henry was the president of this organization for a period of time.

Series V: Printed Material, 1913-1934 consists of five folders of printed material relating to health matters, such as treatment for rattlesnake bites, catarrh and pyorrhea. Among the pamphlets are The U.S. Marine Corps Score Book, 1913 and The History of Our Flag, 1925. Sergeant Henry kept a recipe book with many clippings from newspapers and magazines.

The papers of Joshua D. Vincent has only one series of incoming correspondence, from 1909-1919. It contains letters and greeting cards from family members as well as a letter from the Treasury Department regarding insurance. There is also a certificate appointing him a sergeant, dated September 30, 1919.

The connection between Joshua D. Vincent and George J. Henry is not clear, other than that they both served in the U.S. Army. However, these papers were included with Henry's papers and for this reason have been retained.
