HISTORICAL NOTE

The Tucson Citizen has been the evening newspaper for Tucson, Arizona since 1879. These photographs were taken by various staff photographers to correspond with news articles in the 1950s and 1960s. Many photographs contain the date of the related article.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Photographs, taken in the 1950s and 1960s, of people, activities, events, and other newsworthy occasions. The collections highlights Tucson's growth during this period including images of new schools, shopping centers, businesses, military and defense work, public housing and urban renewal. Images of people in the news include national and local politicians, religious leaders, celebrities, and people with interesting occupations. There are also photographs of business processes and buildings; high schools and hospitals; legal courts and law enforcement activity. Fires and fire fighting and flooding of washes and rivers in Tucson are also present. Many of the images are representative of the 1950s and 1960s including a visit from then President Eisenhower, Davis Monthan Air Force Base,

Viet Nam War draft demonstrations and draft inductees, striking Hughes Aircraft workers, the Short Creek polygamy raids, and civil rights protests. Other images document social activities such as a soapbox derby, a circus, festivals, auto racing, horse racing, polo, and bullfights.
