Playbox Theatre Collection
1945 - 1997*DESCRIPTION

This small collection consists of a series of newspaper clippings, scripts, slides, posters, playbills, programs, and interviews highlighting both the Playbox Theatre Company and the Tucson Press Club Gridiron show, with the bulk of the collection falling in between the years 1959 and 1982. The newspaper clippings showcase the organizational history of the Playhouse Theatre and the Gridiron Show. They also demonstrate public reception of their productions in the form of reviews, mostly from the Tucson Citizen and the Arizona Daily Star. Particular attention is paid to the Gridiron shows from the early 1960's and the Playbox Theatre productions of "The Cuckoo Watch", "Dracula", "Destry Rides Again," and "The Man in the Dog Suit". Original script drafts for "The Cuckoo Watch" and Gridiron Show skits are included in the collection, complete with changes and handwritten notations. Also included is a production script for "Paint Your Wagon". The slides demonstrate the elaborateness of the Playbox's musical and dramatic productions, with special attention being paid to such productions as "The King and I", "Bus Stop," "Wait Until Dark", "Godspell", "Camelot", and "The Sound of Music". The Playbox playbills chronicle the production history of the company. Since most Playbox productions were based on popular plays and movies of the day, they provide insight into the realm of popular culture. Programs for the Gridiron Show, also known as "The Hellbox", provide not only a history of the show but an enduring view of Tucson culture and the political and social climate of each production year. The advertisements in both these publications are also useful for those interested in the history of local Tucson businesses. Of particular interest in the Gridiron interviews are those of Jess Riggle and Marge Hilts, who worked for both the Gridiron show and the Playbox Theatre. Also included in the interviews are Kay Getzwiller, former Press Club member and Hellbox editor, and Tom Turner, former Press Club president.

3 Boxes, 1.25 linear ft.

ORGANIZATIONAL NOTE

The Playbox was a community theatre that began in 1959. It operated for four years at 504 N. Fremont St., after which it acquired a lease for the opera house at Trail Dust Town, where they continued to operate from 1963 until their close in 1982. The productions mostly consisted of popular musicals and dramas, with one production geared toward children per season.

The Gridiron Show was the Tucson Press Club's annual roast. The productions consisted of a series of comedy sketches lampooning both local and nationally known celebrities and political figures. The show was financed by the Tucson Press Club until 1991, after which time the Gridiron Show became its own non-profit organization and funded its shows independently.
