HISTORICAL NOTE

Valley National Bank (or as it is known today as Bank One) traces its history in Arizona back to the early part of the 20th century. Its lineage actually centers on two pioneer banks – the Gila Valley Bank of Solomonville, AZ and the Valley Bank of Phoenix. Although many individuals have been associated with the Valley National Bank and the financial interests of Arizona in general no single individual stands out in that long history like Walter Bimson. The growth and development of the modern Valley National Bank is significantly tied to Bimson and this early period of banking history in Arizona.

The Gila Valley Bank, located in the southeastern portion of Arizona, was founded on January 16, 1900. The major stockholder was Isadore E. Solomon who started Solomonville in 1876 with an agreement to support the copper mines in the area. In addition to the town bank, Solomon was manager of the local dry goods store and hotel. The bank's strategic location to the rich Arizona mining interests made it an important contributor to such communities as Safford, Clifton, and Morenci, Arizona. The Valley Bank on the other hand, was located in Phoenix and provided financial support to agricultural and cattle-raising businesses in that area. In 1914, with a shortage of capital due to overlending and fearing a run on the bank, the Valley bank closed its doors on November 10. Investors in the Valley Bank asked the Gila Valley Bank for assistance in meeting its demands. The Gila Bank purchased assets of the Phoenix bank and eight years later in 1922 the two merged to become the Valley Bank of Arizona (later renamed The Valley Bank and Trust Company) and established itself as the leading financial institution in the state. Other mergers with other institutions followed as the years passed. After the 1935 merger with the National Bank of Tucson a national banking charter was taken out with the name The Valley National Bank of Arizona. That name stayed with the institution until 1992 when it was again merged with Bank One and became the Bank One that we know today.

Walter Bimson became associated with the bank in 1933 during the most stressful and threatening period of the bank's history and the nation's financial stability during the Great Depression. The son of a blacksmith, Bimson took economic courses at University of Colorado, the University of Chicago, and Harvard University and in 1933 he was working at Harris Trust and Savings Bank in Chicago, IL. While employed with Harris Trust Bimson traveled to the Southwest and was greatly impressed with the land and people. With many banks across the nation closing their doors with the fear of insolvency Walter Bimson was hired in that year as president of the Valley National Bank.

Bimson implemented a new and radical banking policy upon arrival when he instructed bank personnel to make loans even in the face of America's greatest financial crisis. Bimson's understanding was that adequate economic funds existed in the communities the only element missing was the initial spark to restart the economy. He provided that "spark" by letting the public know that the Valley Bank was in the lending business to allow buying to get under way. Within a year under his leadership the Valley Bank was the first in Arizona to offer Federal Deposit Insurance to protect its customers' accounts. The Bank participated in the new FHS program as soon as it became available to promote government-guaranteed home loans and helped smaller communities re-establish their banks as the depression went on. Ultimately Bimson and the Valley National Bank were successful and Walter Bimson remained the guiding figure at the bank until his retirement in 1952 but remained chairman of the board until 1970.

Throughout its history the Valley Bank led the state in financial management and innovative programs. In addition to the establishment of federal deposit insurance and FHS home loan programs the bank was the first state bank to enter the credit card field in 1965 and pioneered the direct deposit of Social Security checks to member accounts in 1973. The Social Security Administration was so impressed with the local results that Direct Deposits went nationwide in 1975. Valley National Bank established the first drive-in service and issued the first photo ID check guarantee cards for use by customers. In 1973 the 40-story, reflective glass and concrete Valley Bank Center complex was opened in downtown Phoenix. At the time this building was the tallest structure in Arizona. Since World War II the number of Valley National branch banks continued to grow in Arizona communities. Appropriately enough in 1981 the 200th branch bank was established back at Solomonville, Arizona where one of the bank's founding organizations had been located.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection contains materials from the entire life span of the Valley National Bank. The termination of the collection corresponds to the date when the bank was merged to become Bank One. Early banking documents are present for Gila Valley Bank and other banks which were merged with the Valley National including First National Bank of Glendale, Miners and Merchants bank of Globe, and First National Bank of Douglas. Valley Bank of Phoenix records begins at 1899. Interviews with bank leaders, press clippings, press releases, speeches, and financial records of the banks are present. Various posters depict publicity and general advertisement programs for the bank.

A significant section for researchers is the section dealing with Walter Bimson, president and board president of the bank for 40 years. Biographical materials on Bimson are present as well as correspondence, press releases, speeches, awards, and general bank memos and letters. Bimson's civic activities are included with various institutions both in the Phoenix Valley area and national representation. His local interests included the Phoenix Fine Arts Association, Phoenix Art Museum, and assistance to Arizona State University. Since this material was located together as received the processing decision was made to retain this group of records as a separate series. Photos of Walter Bimson show him with other bank managers and events.

Photos contained in the collection highlight bank activities, events, and individuals. Individual photos of bank executive personnel, including Walter Bimson, have been retained with the folders for those individuals. An additional grouping of photographs came in binders depicting the various branch bank buildings and locations. These images are in a separate series. General photographs show bank activities including groundbreaking ceremonies, speeches and presentations. Of special note are images associated with the Bank's sponsorship of the Sports Hall of Fame for Arizona universities between 1975 and 1985. Some negatives reside throughout the collection with the images they depict. A separate grouping of negatives are near the end of the collection.
