BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE: Born November 6, 1906 in Tucumcari, New Mexico, Alvin Gerhardt graduated with a mining engineering degree from the University of Arizona in 1933. He had fifty years of experience in different phases of mining, including work as an engineer, assayer-chemist, mill superintendent, chief engineer for St. Joseph Lead Company. He moved to Globe, Arizona in 1952 to work as a general superintendent for Jaquays Asbestos Corporation. After his retirement in 1974, Gerhardt continued consulting as an engineer-draftsman for City Service Company in Globe until 1981.

Born October 25, 1907 in Lyndonville, Vermont, Hubert “Mike” Wood graduated with a bachelor’s degree in education from Boston University in the mid-1930s. Teaching until he became a school principal, Wood then became an insurance agent for Pacific Mutual Life. Mike moved to Arizona in 1943 for health reasons and relocated to Globe in 1945 where he sold health insurance until his retirement in 1991.

HISTORICAL NOTE: In 1981, Alvin Gerhardt and Mike Wood became co-workers in an eight-year campaign that attempted to shed light on the asbestos scare that started in Globe, Arizona and eventually spread across the nation. The situation was triggered when the Arizona Department of Health, along with then Governor Bruce Babbitt, declared an area of Globe as “the most health hazardous place in Arizona.” In 1983, this area was declared a SuperFund site by the Environmental Protection Agency and Federal Emergency Management Agency. This involved a mobile home subdivision built upon asbestos tailings from an abandoned mill adjacent to the property. Subsequently, the residents were relocated and homes demolished.

Wood and Gerhardt found this proclamation shocking and unwarranted. Wood had never had a claim involving asbestos-related health issues in his over thirty-five years of selling insurance to asbestos workers in Gila County. With no specific evidence from the State to back up its claim, they began an asbestos health-effect study to determine whether the declaration was well founded. The declaration had a devastating effect on Globe's economy. Even tourists avoided driving through the town.

This region had mined chrysotile asbestos since 1914. Chrysotile represents 95% of the asbestos used worldwide. By collecting and analyzing testimonies of former asbestos workers, they hoped to prove that chrysotile was not a health hazard for Globe or Gila County. Both men believed that any ill effects from asbestos were caused by imported crocidolite asbestos or amosite asbestos, both proven health hazards.

They interviewed 145 former workers about the current health of themselves and family members. They found that no one had reported ill effects from asbestos during their employment or in their post retirement years. They also gathered a variety of scientific reports, news articles and publications for and against chrysotile asbestos. They demonstrated a gradual shift of acceptance by the scientific community and governing bodies that the policy of "one fiber of asbestos can kill you" was grossly overstated. Eventually published reports stated that unless someone was continuously breathing in chrysotile asbestos, the effects had less impact than breathing in second-hand smoke.

Most importantly, through their eight-year campaign, Wood and Gerhardt tried to remove the fear generated by the word asbestos so that the chrysotile industry could return to Gila County. In the end, the fear of asbestos never lessened, and U.S. Congress eventually banned asbestos manufacturing and products, effectively retiring the asbestos industry in Globe and the nation for good.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE: Documents the attempt by Mike Wood and Alvin Gerhardt to save the chrysotile industry in Gila County. The collection includes taped interviews and transcripts from miners as well as field notes, background information and reports about the inner-workings of an active asbestos mine. It also includes correspondence from scientists and government officials, periodicals, and news clippings from various media outlets representing views for and against the hazardous risks of chrysotile asbestos.

This collection is arranged in seven series, alphabetically and chronologically within. Original titles of folders used wherever possible.

Series I: Background – purpose of study, history of mining in Arizona, overall study findings, information on the residential area that was demolished due to the hazardous health designation.

II: Correspondence– letters, correspondence, notes to Wood and Gerhardt from scientists and government officials.

III: Research Files– articles, information on asbestos and the asbestos scare and other hazardous materials; background and field notes on the mine's functions.

IV: Publications– materials generated by companies defending or condoning chrysotile asbestos; includes public hearings within U.S. and Canada about asbestos.

V: Interviews – 145 transcripts from interviews with chrysotile asbestos miners, millers, and transporters from Gila County.

VI: News Clippings– original and duplicated copies of newspaper clippings on various EPA hazards; includes background information on those topics.

VII: Taped Interviews– cassette tapes of the interviewed asbestos workers along with various taped interviews/ recordings from the media by Wood and Gerhardt.
