all Together Now

Last year, Bradford Luckingham's Journal of Arizona History article, "To Mask or Not to Mask: A Note on the 1918 Spanish Influenza Epidemic in Tucson," was the most read online Journal article on JSTOR. This past spring, the Arizona Heritage Center, one of four museums operated by the Arizona Historical Society, hosted an installation that memorialized the lives lost to COVID-19. Being able to examine pandemics of the past in the context of a current pandemic and opening our museums to be places of reflection, are reminders of history's power and relevance. These stories offer us strength and determination as we move forward.

COVID-19 has had a lasting impact on our state, our communities, and the museum field. It forced us to change, to pivot, to try new things, to make hard decisions, to forge new paths. But it did not change our mission to connect people through the power of Arizona's history. We couldn't have achieved this without you, and for that we are truly grateful. You hit "like" on our Facebook posts for #WhereIsItWednesday and followed our #TwitterTakeovers with notable historians.

Together We Celebrate

"Leading the Arizona Historical Society through a transformative time in its history has been a privilege. Over the past three and a half years, efforts towards creating a foundation for major gifts fundraising, resolution of most of the 2013 sunset review and performance audit findings, accreditation by the American Alliance of Museums, shoring up our finances to build in more sustainability, and an agency-wide reorganization have positioned AHS well for a thriving future."

– W. James Burns, Ph.D., Executive Director

In July 2021 leaders from the Instituto Nacional de Antropología e Historia (INAH), the Nogales Diocese, the General Consul of Mexico in Tucson, and the Arizona Historical Society gathered in Nogales, Sonora to formalize an agreement for the return of the 18th-century copper baptismal font to its former home at the Caborca Mission in Sonora.

You supported us on Arizona Gives Day and visited new exhibitions at our museums in Tempe and Tucson. You joined us online for virtual programs and cheered on our National History Day Arizona students.

We are proud of the accomplishments that are helping us to come back stronger. We are thrilled to share that the Arizona Historical Society received full accreditation from the Alliance of American Museums, the highest national recognition afforded the nation's museums. This achievement is a testament to the board and staff's hard work and commitment to excellence in collections care, exhibition development, and programming.

Together we celebrate these accomplishments and highlights with you. Thank you for being with us on this journey, and we look forward to the year ahead.

Together Around the Globe

VIRTUAL PROGRAMS

From discussing Native American Voting Rights to examining Mary Colter's legacy to caring for your family photographs, people from around the world joined us online to learn, discover, and explore Arizona history. Since the onset of the pandemic, we organized and hosted 37 virtual programs with 2,577 people joining us online. Although the majority of virtual program participants were from Arizona, participants logged in from across the globe. Virtual programs were attended by people across 46 states and countries including Canada, Finland, Mexico, Pakistan, and the United Kingdom.

EDUCATION

In 2021, we helped bring Arizona history to life for teachers and students with the Virtual Museum in a Box Curriculum. This program uses primary sources from the Arizona Historical Society's archives and artifacts collection, offering detailed lesson plans and activities.

NATIONAL HISTORY DAY IN ARIZONA (NHDAZ)

New rules, a new rubric, and a virtual contest? The National History Day cycle couldn't have been more different. The theme for 2021 was Communication in History: The Key to Understanding. Students tackled diverse topics that covered World War II, racism and racial violence in the United States, women's political and civil engagement, ancient languages, and environmental issues.

NHDAZ SPONSORS

National History Day Arizona is supported by Albertsons; Arizona Humanities; The Foothills Club of Tucson; Historical League, Inc.; Northern Arizona Pioneers Historical Society; SRP; and Smart & Final.

Library and Archives

AHS Libraries and Archives collect and preserve materials of enduring historical value that allow researchers to explore Arizona's past. Our archivists in Tucson and Tempe answered questions, responded to research requests, and shared content online.

RAILWAYS OF ARIZONA DIGITAL EXHIBIT

Featuring a selection of photographs, oral histories, and artifacts, this digital exhibit brings together items from the Arizona Historical Society's Library & Archives and Museum Collections to highlight the nearly 150-year history of railroads in Arizona. Sponsored by the Union Pacific Foundation.

Collections

The Arizona Historical Society is home to thousands of artifacts - from Wyatt Earp's wedding ring to a World War II AT-6 airplane. Explore our new online catalog that searches the 3D collections of all four museums. <https://azhs.catalogaccess.com/>

WHEN 19TH-CENTURY ARTIFACTS MEET 21ST-CENTURY TECHNOLOGY

Together with the University of Arizona's Center for Digital Humanities, we embarked on our first-ever Digital Humanities project. Students scanned artifacts that belonged to Buffalo Soldiers using a volumetric scanner to make perfect 3D digital renderings. The team will be working to launch a virtual reality experience for students to learn about the Buffalo Soldiers in Arizona.

We announced the receipt of the Migrant Quilt Project into our collections. Founded in Tucson in the mid-2000s, the Migrant Quilt Project memorializes the stories of migrants who have died seeking refuge in the United States. It is a collaborative effort between artists, quiltmakers, and activists to document the names and number of lives lost each year in the desert.

With Arizona at the center of many national issues, from immigration to climate change, what can historians do to ensure that Arizona's past is better understood? The Journal of Arizona History's Autumn/Winter 2020 State of the Field Issue will be studied by historians for years to come. ARIZONA HERITAGE CENTER AT PAPAGO PARK, Phoenix/Tempe

UNFRAMED: A PHOTO JOURNEY THROUGH NAVAJO AND HOPI NATIONS, 1977-1978

During her gap year from college in upstate New York, artist Katharine L. McKenna spent the summers of 1977 and 1978 volunteering at the Museum of Northern Arizona in Flagstaff. While there, she assisted the museum in collecting woven rugs, pottery, baskets, and jewelry for the museum's annual Navajo Arts and Crafts Show. She documented her experience by journaling and taking photographs of the 24 trading posts she visited, the people she met, and the countless miles she traveled through the Navajo and Hopi Nations in Northern Arizona.

MARKED BY COVID MEMORIAL

TOGETHER WE REMEMBER

In March 2021, the Arizona Heritage Center at Papago Park hosted Marked by COVID in partnership with The Floral Heart Project for a floral artwork installation and digital Heartbleed display to honor and memorialize the lives lost to COVID-19 in Arizona. Due to an overwhelming response, the memorial was on display for nearly two months.

ARIZONA HISTORY MUSEUM, Tucson

READY TO LAUNCH: ARIZONA'S PLACE IN SPACE

From capturing the first image of a black hole to creating and hosting telescopes to sending multiple missions to Mars, Arizona has been at the forefront of space discoveries and NASA missions for decades. Visitors discovered objects from NASA, Lowell Observatory, Arizona State University, and the University of Arizona, including an Apollo-era Buzz Aldrin spacesuit, hand-drawn moon maps, and photographs of deep space.

"Ready to Launch" is sponsored by Paragon Space Development Corporation and supported by Arizona Humanities and Albertsons. Special thanks to Senator Mark Kelly, Arizona State University, the University of Arizona, Lowell Observatory, USGS, and NASA Johnson Space Center.

BARRY GOLDWATER, K7UGA, ON THE AIR, IN THE SKY, BEHIND THE LENS

Born before Arizona became a state, Barry Goldwater (1909-1998) loved Arizona. View the careful reconstruction of his ham radio station, photographs, and personal memorabilia, and learn more about the personal life and achievements of Goldwater's life outside of politics.

SANGUINETTI HOUSE MUSEUM & GARDENS, Yuma

In the heart of downtown Yuma resides the enchanted Sanguinetti House Museum and Gardens—the Jewel of Historic Yuma. A new exhibition, “Growing Yuma: The E.F. Sanguinetti Story”, will open in 2021 for a glimpse into Yuma’s past as seen through the entrepreneurial eyes of E. F. Sanguinetti, the Merchant Prince of Yuma.

PIONEER MUSEUM, Flagstaff

Even while Pioneer Museum remained temporarily closed, more than 2,600 visitors toured the beautiful grounds. The closure provided an opportunity to complete significant refreshes to the upstairs exhibits and install a new roof on the Doney Cabin. Visitors will be able to experience artifacts and stories of Flagstaff’s beginning, growth, and ongoing cultural evolution.

WATCH OUR VIRTUAL PROGRAM WITH DR. WONG, “NEVER ALONE” ON OUR YOUTUBE CHANNEL.

Arizona Public Media’s Nina Shelton, Jim Wong, and his granddaughter Katie made a special visit to Pioneer Museum in Flagstaff to talk about the Wong family’s legacy. The interview on Arizona Illustrated features Dr. Wong’s mother, Dew Yu Wong, who is featured in the “Resilience” exhibition.

President's Message

Linda Whitaker, AHS Board President, 2020–2021

The Arizona Historical Society (AHS) is one of the smallest State agencies with one of the largest State Boards (25 positions). The legislative decision in 2015 to move AHS from a self-appointed Board to one that is Governor-appointed has proven to be transformational. Fast forward to 2020, this appointment process resulted in the most diverse board in AHS history. Board composition was a key factor in securing full accreditation from the American Association of Museums for all four locations—Flagstaff, Tempe, Tucson, and Yuma. How?

- ▶ We shared an urgency and understanding with Arizona Boards and Commissions of the Board qualities we needed.
- ▶ We communicated agency priorities, expectations, and goals.
- ▶ We created a comprehensive, contemporary Board Orientation Manual.
- ▶ We planned and implemented an Orientation Program highlighting staff members, departments, and projects.
- ▶ We modeled problem-solving strategies to address acute needs and chronic legacy practices.
- ▶ We embraced digital communications and an increased online presence.

- ▶ We empowered Board and staff members to contribute across the agency—notably the Board Finance Committee, Staff Communications, Facilities Management, and Membership.

- ▶ Invested in the infrastructure for a Capital Campaign that included a feasibility study and a comprehensive Gift Policy.
- ▶ Diverted routine tasks to focus on digital outreach, messaging, and website content.
- ▶ Developed a consistent, engaging communication plan that reached a record number of state officials, organizations, AHS members, and the general public.
- ▶ Stabilized AHS membership and increased level of membership financial support by 7%.

WHAT WERE THE RESULTS? HERE ARE SOME HIGHLIGHTS.

- ▶ Decreased a running annual expense rate from $666,697 to $5,000 without staff layoffs.
- ▶ Increased support from the State's Capital Improvement Plan to address deferred maintenance by $1,000,000.
- ▶ Applied for and received over $900,000 in relief funding.

THE MAGIC WORD IS WE—BOARD AND STAFF. TOGETHER. INTENTIONAL, HARD WORK, PERSISTENCE.
